Only an Expert Agent Can Give You an Accurate Value of Your Home

In today's digital age, it's tempting to rely on automated tools for everything — including figuring out how much your house is worth. But be careful. The automated estimates you're seeing online often miss key details that affect the true market value of your home.

Before you toss a for sale sign in your yard and expect to bring in the number you saw for your house online, you need to understand why these tools generally aren't spot-on and why working with an expert real estate agent is the best way to get an accurate picture of what your house is really worth.

The Myth: Online Home Value Estimates Are Accurate

Online home valuation tools give you an approximate value for your house based on the data that's publicly available for your home. While this can give you a rough starting point, the keyword here is rough. As an article from Ramsey Solutions says: "Online Home Value Estimators Aren't 100% Accurate . . .

"The estimates are only as reliable as the amount of public record data the real estate websites can access. The less data gathered for your particular neighborhood, county and state, the less you can depend on this number."

The Reality: Online Estimates Miss Key Factors

Here's the biggest issue with online estimates: they don't take into account the unique aspects of your home or your local market. And that's why an agent's expertise can make such a difference when figuring out what your house is really worth. Here's an example. A real estate agent will also factor in:

- The Home's Condition:

Online tools can't tell whether your home has been well-maintained or if it needs significant repairs. The condition of your house plays a huge role in its value, and only an in-person walk-through can account for that.

- The Latest Neighborhood Trends:

Is your neighborhood up-and-coming? Are there new developments or amenities nearby that make your home more desirable? Automated tools often overlook local trends that can significantly affect the value of your home.

- Accurate Comparable Sales:

While online estimates may use past sales data as a baseline, they don't always reflect the most recent or most relevant comparable sales, or comps. Real estate agents, on the other hand, have access to up-to-date market data and can give you a much more accurate estimate based on real-time sales in your area.

Agents have a deep understanding of the local market, and they can provide insights that automated tools simply can't match.

As Bankrate explains:

"Online estimation tools determine pricing using algorithms that rely on publicly available information. These algorithms can vary widely from one tool to the next and typically don't account for a home's current condition or any upgrades or renovations that are not reflected in public records. So they are not as accurate as in-person methods, like a real estate agent's comparative market analysis . . ."

Bottom Line

While online home value estimates can be a helpful tool to get a rough idea of what your home is worth, they aren't foolproof. The true value of your home depends on a range of factors that automated tools just can't account for.

To get the most accurate estimate, let's connect. That way you have expert guidance and up-to-date market insights to set the best possible price for your home.

Epic Pork Belly Tacos

Ingredients (Serves 2)

- 200g (7.05 oz) higher-welfare boneless pork belly, skin off
- 1 clove of garlic
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 2 spring onions
- 15g (0.53 oz) cilantro
- 1 green apple
- 1 lime
- olive oil
- 1 red chilli
- 2 frozen corn on the cob
- 1 x 425g (15 oz) tin of black beans
- 1 tomato
- red wine vinegar
- 6 small tortillas
- 30ml (1.01 fl oz) soured cream
- 1 tablespoon chipotle hot sauce

Directions

1. Use a non-stick frying pan on a medium heat. Slice the pork into  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch thick slices and rub with a pinch of sea salt and black pepper. Cook for 12-15 minutes, until the fat is well rendered, turning occasionally. Peel and grate in  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the garlic clove and sprinkle in the allspice, tossing to coat.
2. Trim and finely chop the spring onions, finely chop most of the cilantro leaves (reserving the stalks), and core and dice the apple. Place in a small bowl. Finely grate the lime zest and put aside for later. Squeeze the (lime) juice into a bowl, drizzle in 1 tablespoon of olive oil and add a pinch of salt. Finely slice and add half of the chilli (deseed if you like), and toss together.
3. Carefully char the corn cobs directly over a flame on the hob until blackened all over, turning occasionally. Remove the charred corn kernels, using a tea towel to hold the cob upright on a board and running a knife down to the base, all the way around, then add the kernels to the pork pan, tossing in the fat to coat.
4. Finely grate the remaining garlic and chilli with the tomato into a bowl. Finely chop and add the reserved cilantro stalks, drizzle in 1 tablespoon of oil and 2 tablespoons of red wine vinegar, then add the charred corn, tossing to combine.
5. Once the pork is crispy, transfer to a board to rest. Pour the black beans into the pan (juice and all), along with 1 tablespoon of vinegar, and simmer for 3 minutes, gently mashing some with a fork. Season to perfection and add a little more allspice, if you like.
6. Warm the tortillas, then load up with the black beans, slices of pork belly, charred corn salad and apple slaw. Divide up and dollop over the soured cream, then ripple through the hot sauce and scatter over the reserved cilantro leaves and lime zest, to serve.

Southern Exposure by Tami Wenning (March/April)

Oh boy! I'm running behind on getting this submitted so hang on tight! This could be a scary ride by the time it's over. Although I love living where we have all four seasons, this is my least favorite. It is beautiful when it snows and I still marvel at it when it happens, but I long for longer days of sunshine (and not just that fake "time change" thing!). I feel as if I am solar-powered and getting sunshine just fills my soul with happiness.

Currently, my soul is a bit gloomy, just like the weather. I have no reason for this other than I miss the sunshine. I've heard other people talk about it so I know it isn't just me that longs to plant things and graze on home-grown green stuff. But, we must wait... and be patient... Something I'm not famous for! I've started seeds indoors way too early and it just doesn't ever work out like my head thinks it will. Might be because I've got too many irons in the fire and I don't pay attention to them like I should. They either die from lack of water or they get tall and spindly and I'm too disorganized to make sure they get exposed to the sun gradually. I do the same with myself and I know if I get a sunburn, those puny little plants grown indoors are really not up to going full sun all at once. I can slap some aloe on my sunburn but those tender little plants just stay crispy. Hmm, I think my first book will be called "When Green Thumbs Go Rogue".

By the time you're reading this, I should have been on a trip to see the Northern Lights in Alaska. If you're reading this and we're not back, we decided to stay! We will be celebrating 40 years of marriage later this year but are heading to Fairbanks now because the sun has been super active and the Aurora Borealis has been crazy beautiful.

Soon, I'll be out on the deck of a cabin in the dark singing praises about God's glorious light show. Luckily, the people traveling with us know we're sort of weird.

There are just so many amazing things to experience. I've gotten myself in a better frame of mind just by writing this because I know there is plenty to do before spring gets here.

I hope that, even if you have to work in it, you're able to enjoy some of what each season brings. Oh yeah, my FAVORITE time of the year is coming up soon. The reopening of the Westport Dairy Queen. When our kids were little, that was something we really looked forward to. They grew up to become ice cream aficionados and wherever they've lived, they've always known where to get the best. But, as the old saying goes, there is NO PLACE LIKE HOME! We've managed to get several exchange students to become lifelong DQ fans through the years. We do OUR part for the local economy.

Thanks for sticking with me to the very end. I mean, there was probably something else that you could have been doing but you are not a quitter. I like that about you! Take care and I'll share some pictures with you soon.

Preparing Your Yard for Spring

Expert Tips from Mullins Outdoor

Tips: From a Man's Point of View

Spring is a time of renewal, not just for nature but for your outdoor spaces as well. As the temperatures rise and the days grow longer, your yard deserves some care to shake off the remnants of winter and bloom to its full potential. At Mullins Outdoor, we've compiled some expert tips to help you prepare your yard for the season ahead.

1. Clear the Debris

Winter often leaves a mess behind, from fallen branches to accumulated leaves. Start by removing debris from your lawn, flower beds, and other landscaped areas. Clearing the clutter not only enhances the appearance of your yard but also prepares it for healthier growth.

2. Tend to Your Trees and Shrubs

Inspect trees and shrubs for any signs of winter damage. Prune dead or broken branches to encourage new growth and maintain their shape. If you have larger trees requiring attention, consider professional tree trimming services to ensure safety and precision.

3. Lawn Revival

Your lawn may look tired after the winter months. Rake away dead grass and consider aerating your lawn to allow air, water, and nutrients to penetrate the soil. Reseed bare patches and apply a slow-release fertilizer to give your grass a healthy start.

4. Focus on Stump Grinding

Leftover stumps from previous seasons can be an eyesore and a hazard. Stump grinding is an efficient way to remove these obstacles and create a clean, open space for new landscaping ideas.

5. Refresh Flower Beds

Remove old mulch and weeds from flower beds, and turn the soil to improve aeration. Add fresh mulch to retain moisture and prevent weed growth. Consider planting vibrant spring flowers like tulips, daffodils, and pansies to brighten your yard.

6. Plan for Landscaping Enhancements

Spring is the perfect time to implement new landscaping projects. Whether it's installing a new garden, creating a stone pathway, or adding mulch to your beds, Mullins Outdoor can help bring your vision to life.

Tips: From a Man's Point of View

7. Address Drainage Issues

Check for pooling water or areas with poor drainage. Proper grading and drainage solutions can protect your yard from erosion and water damage, ensuring a healthier landscape.

8. Prepare for Pests

As temperatures rise, pests become more active. Protect your yard by removing standing water where mosquitoes breed and consider using eco-friendly pest control measures to keep critters at bay.

9. Set Up a Maintenance Plan

Consistency is key to keeping your yard in top shape throughout the season. Establish a regular schedule for mowing, trimming, and edging. Our team at Mullins Outdoor offers customizable lawn care packages to make yard maintenance hassle-free.

10. Call in the Experts

Preparing your yard for spring can be overwhelming, but you don't have to do it alone. Mullins Outdoor specializes in tree services, stump grinding, lawn care, and landscaping to help you create a stunning outdoor space you can enjoy all season long.

Let Mullins Outdoor Help You This Spring!
